We learn from the National Intelligener that the loyal Governor, Pierpont, of Virginia, has laid grave charges against General Butler before the Government and members of Congress. The Governor, to quote from the Intelligencer, has deemed himself placed under "the painful necessity" of calling the formal attention of the President and of the Congress of the United States to "the abuses of military power in Virginia," alleged to be perpetrated under the auspices of Major Gen. Butler, commanding at Fortress Monroe. The charges which the Governor brings against this officer relates to "the capricious exercise of power outside of the rules of war, in a manner justly to render the military authority obnoxious to the friends of the Government and the Union cause." And it is openly charged that these abuses are instituted and sustained for corrupt and mercenary purposes.

The past cause of this disgrace to the service is, unfortunately, such as to induce the belief that these charges are well founded, even if they were not sustained by the authority of a devoted friend of the Administration and its policy. His offenses are of a character similar to those which necessitated his moval from the command of the Department of the Gulf; and, in fact, partake of the covetous and unscrupulous naure of the man himself. It is useless to hope, however, that the course of Governor Pierpont will result in the removal of Butler, or even a rebuke for his fraudulent and despotic cts. The same radical pressure and unity of entiment with the Administration which secured his position in the army will doubtless the evils, however, arising from his retention, and worthy of the consideration of the counry, is thus put by the Governor:

When he acquiesced in throwing the old Constitution away, he might have known that new one would fare no better. Governor Brown, of Georgia, is no better than Stevens. He, too, is Copperheadish, and sends a message to the Legislature, in which he talks cross about these acts.

The truth is, Jeff Davis & Co. are running a machine in competition with Abraham Lincoln & Co., and give way to the same temptation. They don't say so quite; but they hold, too, that what might otherwise be unconstitutional may become lawful, &c. Some of the Abolition sheets are very much disgusted with this Confederate despotism. They see when they look at themselves.

There are two conventions of the Republican party for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Presidency. The Baltimore convention is called by the supporters of Abraham Lincoln and the Cleveland convention by the still more radical wing of the call for the convention and judge for themselves of the movement, we transfer it to our columns elsewhere this morning. It is a sort of political flank movement on the Baltimore Wendell Phillips indorses the convention.

The New York Herald's reporter says ur officers were surprised at the number of Lee's troops. This is a very innocent emotion. It could not be expected reasonably that Lee had not a large force. We are told regularly that the South is exhausted in her means of men and produce; but such stories have been so often disproved that no one credits them. It is most likely that Lee has men enough to answer his purpose. It is not men that are wanted on either side, but brains. The skill of the commander will determine the victory at last.

DEFACING PUBLIC MONUMENTS .- One Hoyt, Captain of volunteers, having a little brief authority in New Orleans as acting Mayor, caused the following inscription to be made upon the splendid monument to Mr. Clay, which his admirers had caused to be erected in Canal street:

If I could be instrumental in eradicating this deepest stain—slavery—from the charac-ter of cur country, and removing all cause of reproach on account of it, I would not exchange the proud satisfaction which I could enjoy for the honor of all the triumphs ever decreed the most successful conqueror.

This purports to be an extract from one of Mr. Clay's speeches before the American Colonization Society in 1827. It is not unlikely that some other Captain may get control of the monument long enough to cause the following inscription to be made upon it from be strong enough to retain him in power, no one of Mr. Clay's later speeches, after he had natter what offenses he may commit. ARKANSAS RIVER, May 3, 1864. General Steele returned on the 2d to Little ock, from his campaign toward the Red ver. Like the hypothetical King of France that the legendary couplet discribes, he "marched up the hill and then marched down again." The 7th Army Corps entered Little Rock yesterday after a campaign of forty days in which nothing has been gained but defeat,

In which nothing has been gained but defeat, hard blows and poor fare.

Let me give a brief history of the recent movement acting in conjunction with Gen. Banks and the force from Vicksburg. Gen. S'eele left Little Rock wi'h 12 000 men on the 23d of March. Gen. Thayer, with the Army of the Frontier, left Fort Smith on the 22d. His division numbered about 5 500 men.

division numbered about 5,500 men.

Price was known to be in command of the rebel forces in Southern Arkansas. His army was reported at about 12,000 and occupied a line from Camden, at the head of navigation on the Ouachita river, west to Washington in Hamstead county. Camden is strongly forti-Hamstead county. Camden is strongly fortifled and is a position of the greatest importauce for all movements looking to the occupation of the Red river and confluent streams.
The rebels had remained here undisturbed since our occupation of the Arkansas valley.
In this region they obtained abundance of forage and subsistence, and it was known that their troops were well clothed, and in good spirits, while their stock was in excellent order. Ours, on the contrary, was poor, indeed.

Camden was the point at which Steele was aiming. He, himself, moved from Little Rock, one hundred and twenty miles north of Camden. Thayer had about one hundred and eighty miles to march. Clayton was to move a small column from Pine Bluffs, eighty miles. This latter was the only successful one made. Clayton captured a pontoon bridge over the Saline, attacked and dispersed a cavalry force under Dockeray, taking a number of prison-

General Steele moved towards Washingto sixty miles west of Camden, evidently with the design of flanking the latter place and drawing out of the fortifications what forces there might be in there. He proceeded leis-urely enough to execute that design. After urely enough to execute that design. After crossing the Saline, the enemy's cavalry appeared on our finks and rear, though not seriously menacing us. At the Little Missouri, sixteen miles east of Washington, the rebels appeared in force. Steele, from his movements, evidently believed it to be Price's entire army. The fact new appears to be that it was only Marmaduke's cavalry division of about five thousand mer. The balance of Price's army was returning from the battle with Banks at Grand Ecore. Marmaduke had been left to watch Steele. Their first meeting was on the 14th ultimo. Steele had moved one hundred and ten miles in twenty-two days, at the rate of five miles per day. The commander of the Seventh army day. The commander of the Seventh ar corps went through some brilliant tactical movements, but did not drive the enemy or develope their forces. Officers engaged in develope their forces. Officers engaged in the operations of those three days think that General Steele was engaged in pleasing the Missouri General with a fine display of field movements. Heavy skirmishing ensued. On the 16th Gen. Thayer joined Steele. Next morning Marmaduke disappeared. Steele commenced a rapid movement to Camden, which he succeeded in reaching first, although his march was harassed by Marmaduke.

Having possession of Camden, it would appear that a strenuous effort should have been ear that a strenuous effort sho made to hold it. The country was full of forage and corn. Our gunboats could have made an effort to reach it. The distance from Pine Bluff, from which place supplies were to come, was but eighty miles. General Steele soon allowed himself to evacuate Camden and return to his former lines on the Arkansas. It was evident that the follows of kansas. It was evident that the failure of Banks on the Red river endangered Steele to some extent. The force of the latter num-bered 17,000. The rebels were certainly not able to concentrate more than this number. From the best information I can gather, their entire force in Western Louisians and Southern Arkansas amounts to about 25,000 men By the failure to make conjoint movements, Kirby Smith has been enabled to concentrate his entire force, first against Binks and then against Steele. As it was not in the plan for the latter to act alone and make head against the enemy, of course he fell back.

True his communications were interrupted, and Little Rock threatened. The day following Steele's occupation of Camden, Price appeared in force some six miles to the south. A pontoon-bridge was flung across the Ouachi-ta, below the mouth of the Little More, some thirty miles east of Camden. Trees were feli-ed in the stream, and other obstacles put in the way of navigation. By means of the pon-toon bridge the rebel cavalry under Major Gen-eral Fagin crossed to the north of Camden, and cut off the supplies.

General Steele sent out a foraging expedition on the 21st or 221, to a point sixteen miles west. The train consisted of over 150 wagons, and the escort, under command of Colonel James M. Williams, First regiment Kansas colored infantry, consisting of his Kansas colored infantry, consisting of his regiment (the first negro regiment organized during the war), a portion of the Eighteenth Iowa, a portion of the Second and Sixth Kansas cavairy, with two howitzers and a section of the Eighth Indiana battery, in all less than one thousand men. On the return march, at Poison Springs, twelve miles west of Camden, the command was attacked by at least five thousand rebels. A large force was held in reserve. Colonel Williams fought his command most gallantly from eight A. M. to mand most gallantly from eight A. M. to twelve M., until his ammunition was exhaust-ed. He had two horses shot under him ed; seventeen of the Second Kansas and about the same number of the Sixth and battery. In ct; seventeen of the Second Kansas and about the same number of the Sixth and battery. In all our loss was about two hundred and thirty, four guns and the trains, with a number of arms. Considering the odds, it is a wonder that any of the party escaped. Nothing but their desperate valor saved those who reached Camden. Word was sent in by the rebels that no quarter would be given to Kansas soldiers, black or white. The Iowa wounded were killed after capture under the impression that they belonged to the Twelfth Kansas, with which regiments the First and Second colored regiments are brigaded.

About the 25th, a train returning from Camden to Pine Bluffs, escorted by the 77th Ohio, some Indiana cavalry and four guns of a Missouri battery, was attacked by a superior cavalry force under Marmaduke. After a short fight the 77th currendered. The train consisted of 500 wagons, and had with it over three hundred refugees, principally women and children, black and white. I was informed at Pine Bluff that, acting under Marmaduke's orders, the majority of these p of wretches were brutally assassinated, being indiscriminately shot down. Caildren were murdered in their mother's arms. The bodies were left where they fell. This statement was made to me by Major Walker, of the 5th Kansas cavalry, one of the most active and reliable officers in this army. By this capture Price obtained five hundred six-mule teams and wagons, four brass guns, and several hundred stand of arms. General Steele evacuated Camden on the 25th or 26th, and commenced his retreat to Little Rock by the most direct route. He was closely followed by the entire rebel army under Price. His rear was held by General Thayer, who was pressed closely. At the Saline, forty-five miles south of Little Rock, where we arrived on the 29th, being apprehensive of an attack upon that place by Fagin, Steele sent a brigade of cavalry, under Colonel Cloud, of the Kansas Second, to re-enforce General West, who had superseded General Rimbal.

The rebels disputed the passage of th

General West, who had the passage of the Kimball.

The rebels disputed the passage of the Saline by our forces, and a severe engagement ensued on the 30th. General Steele drove them back several miles, after some hours' fighting, thus securing the uninterrupted passage of the river. He was not able, however, to recover all of his dead and wounded. Dr. Sluckslager, of the 12th Kansas, and a party acting under his direction, were taken prisoners after sundown. Our loss in killed and wounded in this fight must be between 600 and 800. In this engagement the 2d Kansas, colored regiment, greatly distinguished itself. Colonel Crawford was in command. It was in the severest portion of the battle, and twice charged the rebel line, breaking it and driving them back disordered. The four guns captured by Marmaduke were recaptured by the negroes, who also took a battle flag. The regiment lost seventy-two killed and wounded. Several officers were wounded, but none killed.

General Steele reached Little Rock on the 2d (yesterday). During this campaign he has lost several hundred wagons, some twenty guns, captured or abandoned, about two thousand men killed and wounded, and over a thousand stand of arms captured.

sand men killed and wounded, and over a thousand stand of arms captured.

Little Rock, Pine Bluffs and Fort Smith are all menaced. A large amount of supplies has just been sent to the latter point. Some seven or eight boats are in the river. The enemy followed to within twenty miles of the Rock, and are to-day reported eight miles from Pine Bluffs, which post your correspondent has just left, by a steamer released by the Quartermaster.

Certainly, taking all things into consideration, the campaign west of the Mississippi has not been very creditable to our arms. Banks has what the boys call "cotton on the braid," and the same disease efflicted the naval portion of the attacking force. The trouble with Steele seems to be a chronic attempt at conciliation as a policy and strategy as a means. He is great on combination and tactics, but rather slow on the fight. He would have undoubtedly whipped them had the rebels moved "scientifically," but they "didn't see it." It would not be a bad move to try a Blunt policy—give the army here a man who Blunt policy—give the army here a man who fights and never knows when he is beat, and we shall have success.

EVERBODT FOR LINCOLN.—It is amusing to see accounts of meetings of little office-holders and official pap-suckers, too lazy or intemperate to obtain a living-by honest labor, indorsing Lincoln and spouting much patriotism on street-corners. Their intense love for the President, so earnestly exhibited, reminds us of a little story, as Old Abe says.

A man was riding through a rough and ruin-marked country one day, when he saw a half-starved, lazy, drunken long-fingered cuss, digging like a dog at a hole in a bank; says he:

he:

"Hallo! wbat are you up to, stranger?"

"Me; I's digging out a woodchuck!"

"Do you expect to eatch him?"

"Catch 'im? Great God! (as Jim Lane says), there is no expect about it! It's woodchuck or starvation, for there ain's enough of meat in the house to smell after it's spoilt, and I'm busted at all the groceries." busted at all the groceries."
[La Crosse (Wis.) Democrat. RETALIATION.—The Springfield (Mass) Republican, discussing the law and practice of retaliation, furnishes the following historical parallel: During the war of 1812 there was no instance of retaliation by the infliction of death, though of retaliation by the infliction of death, though the right was repeatedly asserted in the strongest terms. The most noteworthy instance was when, after the battle of Queenstown, the British selected twenty-three Irish prisoners to be sent to England and tried for high treasor. Scatt threatened retaliation, and an equal number of British prisoners were set apart to await the fate of the Irish. The British thereupon imprisoned forty six Americans, and forty-five British officers were immediately selected and held as hostages for their safety and restoration. The matter finally subsided, with no executions on either side.

The editor of the Baltimore American visited the Commissary Department of one of the large military hospitals a few days since, and noticed several barrels of dried coffee grounds, the purpose whereof excited curiosity. "Well," said the Commissary, hesitatingly, "it is rearomatised by the transforming hand of modern chemistry, and put in pound papers, which are decorated with attractive labels and high-sounding names."

WASHINGTON, May 10.

The Army of the Potomac had a portion of the day to recuperate.

Burns de on Monday began the attack of Burnside on Monday began the strack on the left with great tury and with an encourag-ing degree of success. He had a fight the day befor, in which, to use his own words, "We befor, in which, to use his own words, we hipped old Longstreet."

Our army could not be in a more cheerful condition. The men are sanguine of success, and count the day when they shall in triumph enter the rebel capital.

Lee lately issued an order in relation to supplies, in which he said that his communication with Richmond was cut cff, and it was impossible to furnish the men with supplies. Hill's corps had not had rations issued for three days. Lee erjoins upon his men the necessity days. Lee enjoins upon his men the necessity of capturing supplies from the Yankees. Up to this moment they have failed to capture a single wagon.

The roads are in excellent traveling order but very dusty.

All the battles thus far have been a series of attacks and repulses. Muskets were almost entirely used, the swampy nature of the ground reniering artillery impracticable. Lee very absurdly claims a victory, when he with draws from our front and retires towards Richmond.

General Talbot's division of cavalry whipped General Tabot's division of cavary whitped the rebel cavalry near this place, and drove them from Spottsylvania Courthouse; but be-ing re-enforced with infantry, they drove us a short distance. The Maryland brigade, Fourth division and Sixth corps, coming to their sup-port, the fighting was exceedingly fierce. Generals Torbett and Robinson were both wounded.

General Sedgewick was shot through the head on Monday morning while superintend-ing the moving of some heavy guns on an an-gle which the men had just prepared. There was no skirmishing at the time, but an occasional sharpshooter sent a bullet in that direc-

[Correspondence of the N. Y. Herald.] NEWBERN, N. C., May 7. On Thursday, the 5th, P. M., the rebel ram Albemarle, accompanied by the Cotton Plant and army gunboat Bombshell, captured by them at Plymouth, appeared at the mouth of the Roanoke river. The gunboats Mismi, Whitehead, Ceres, and Commodore Hull, who was bring leven, the river, in the Sound on were lying close to the river, in the Sound, on perceiving the ram, designed entering the Sound, as if fearful of an encourter, but only anxious to draw the rams into the Sound.

Our gunboats, seven in number, immediately opened fire, and a terrific engagement encued, lasting from 5 c'clock till 6 r. M. Darring the early part of the battle the Cotton Plant succeeded in making her escape, and the ram, firing rapidly, slowly and steadily retreated up the Sound. The Bombshell was soon captured, with all on board, thirty-four in number. The Sassachus, having an iron prow, steamed at full speed into the ram, striking her shaft the center but appacently. striking her abaft the center, but apparently without inflicting any injury. The Sassachus, however, was compelled to retire, having her forward rudder knocked off and a 100 pourder Parrott shot fired by the ram through her

Night had now set in and the movements of the ram could not be accurately discerned. Closely pursued by our gunboats and under cover of darkness the ram succeeded in gaining and entering the Roanoke river, where our gunboats could not venture to follow her. The ram carried at least four 100 poned Parrott guns. She has not been seen since. Measures nave been taken to capture or destroy her. Reliable reports from Kings on say the rebel ram Neuse was high aground. She draws seven and one-half feet, and only four and onehalf feet of water in the river have abandoned her for the present and taken her engines out.

The Herald says that probably Butler had another severe battle yesterday, and likely, also, that a great battle between the Union There are five Union and three rebel iron-clads commenced yesterday. There are five Union and three rebel iron-clads expected to take part in the engagement. The Dalton correspondent of the Atlanta Register avers that there has been a greater concentration of the Union forces in the direction of Chattanooga than reported on the Potomac, and the Raleigh Press confirms the statement.

The Tribune's Charleston correspondent says that there has been a thorough destruc-tion of the railroad from the Wentoga river down to Buil's Gap.

Washington, May 10.

It is believed from reports which have reached here to-night that there was no general engagement yesterday, but as heavy firing was heard this morning at Acquia creek, in the direction of Spottsylvania Courthonse, the contest must have been renewed. NEW YORK, May 11.

The World's Special says Lee's entire army was on Monday, in the south bend of the Glody river, between that and the river Po. His right stretched nearly to Fredericksburg and the Richmond Plank Ruad, which he seemed desirous of reaching, to obtain supplies, and insure his safety.

We have taken more prisoners in Lee's retreat than during Thursday's and Friday's battles.

All the information in Grant's possession is of the most favorable character, showing clearly Lee's retreat beyond Spottsylvania.
